oleme on the system of payment invariably in advance. THE DELAY in the passage by the Senate of the suncing the appointment of Williams, Blanchard & Co. Act to carry into effect the treaty of reciprocity which passed the House on the 8th of May, is attributable to several causes. First, the time of the Senate has been taken up with the quespart full information to patrons and to adjust whatever dif- tion of its jurisdiction in the impeachment of Secretary Belknap; then came the political excitement of the Cincinnati nomination convention, which drew away some Congressmen from Washington-among them Mr. Cameron, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs. and Fine Crushed, 12c; Granulated, 11fc; Yellow C, 10fc & the A telegram of the 21st June, received in this city from our Minister at Washington, states that on Mr. Cameron's return, which was daily expected, the committee were prepared to report the bill to the Senate with the recommendation would be acted on without any further delay.

A VERY few lines will suffice to tell all that has been accomplished in the Legislature during the week past. They have voted themselves some more postage stamps and a daily allowance of ten pounds of ice; and they passed to a third reading an act to make the prohibition on the sale of alcoholic drinks applicable to naturalized as well as native born Hawaiians. / During the debate, some sharp things were said about the liquor traffic, both retail and wholesale, the Attorney General characterizing it as " direputable business," and the Hon. Mr. Kaai speaking with equal latitude and more pointed application to "present company." While the theory of 29-P M sa City of Sydney, Dow, 8 days from San Fran 29-Schr Fairy Queen, Kasina, from Hanalei, Kausi the bill is correct, in practice its provisions would prove troublesome and lead to such complications as would render it a dead letter. The object in bringing it forward was unquestionably to illustrate the abstract injustice of making a distinction between different classes of the King's

A HEALTH MEASURE.

Honolulu owes much of its reputation for healthiness to its locality and the nature of the soil upon which it is built; and we can say very little as to the means taken to preserve intact the last of these advantages. We have gone on year after year hiding all things offensive to the sense of smell underground, trusting to the hidden agencies of natural drainage and disinfecting properties of the soil to carry off disease-generating influences, and quietly ignoring the fact that there is such a thing as overburdening the ground with refuse matter, and that grading, filling in and building, has altered the nature of the soil so that its sanitary properties are weakened each succeeding

Diseases of low type have developed themselves in our midst of late years, until now their recurrance is as regular as in many cities of other parts of the world; and although their epidemic form is as yet nothing like so fatal as older tropical towns (Rio Janeiro, for instance) yet they prevail, and excite wellfounded apprehension for the future.

This state of things is due, in a great measure, to the want of a system of artificial drainage. which should have been provided long ago, Everything in the situation of the city favor the construction of a triple line of sewers Everything in the state line of sewers and the construction of a triple line of sewers

According to the statements of many of the lepers, the supervention of acute diseases upon leprosy, such as diarrhaa, coughs, and colds is common which for want of regular medical attendance often prove rapidly fatal; and the desire seems to be general that some one able to prescribe in such cases should be sent to live among them Such a desire is certainly I's TO SUBSCRIBERS .- We shall send bills at once for not without reason, as with all the drugs supplied to all subscriptions remaining unpubl; and we ask the kind co- the dispensary, there is still lacking the necessary operation of our patrens to enable us to commence the new education among those in charge of the same to use them to their best advantage. But then the question comes, who with such education as would be necessary, could be induced to bear such expatriation as would be his share, among a colony of human beings possessing alone all that is grim and ghastly to the utmost possible degree in human physical conformation, unenlivened by a single feature of beauty common to humanity? As expressed by one of the lepers who addressed the Committee, the inhabitants of the place were "doomed to a living grave." In regard to their food, although no doubt the best that the Board of Health can supply with the appropriations at their disposal, it is perhaps of a kind not always the best suited to the needs of people afflicted with this particular disease, as at times they are necessitated to use salted instead of fresh provisions, a WR. W. peculiarity of diet generally understood to be conducive to its most rapid development. As is the case in other countries, variety and good quality in the articles of diet and an abundance of comforts generally, seem to aid materially in mitigating the force of the disease and in prolonging life. This is seen in those, who having means themselves, are not dependent upon the Board of Health for their supplies. but receive them to order from their own friends and agents in Honolulu. At the meeting of the Committee, Komoikeehuchu a former member of the Legislature and a well known lawyer of this place, but now a leper himself) acted as spokesman for those who had complaints to make. He had little, however, to say against the management of the colony, but complained bitterly of the locality selected for their habitation, as being one ill-suited to the comfort of sick people; of the disease itself being non-contagious, and of the testimony to that effect by a British Naval physician, who had visited the settlement on a former occasion; of instances which had occurred to his own observation, seeming to substantiate such a conclusion. The burden of his plea was that the lepers should either be released, or have a place provided for them with a more congenial climate, a more pleasing landscape, and more fruitful soil. With regard to assertions made by physicians visiting the place, that "the disease is not contagious" or that "two thirds of the cases are not lepers," we cannot speak in too strong reprehension. Such assertions are too contradictory to the general opinion of medical men here in reference both to contagion and specificity to carry any weight with them, excepting to those poor unfortunates whose lot it is to be so circumstanced that their only " hope is against hope." To excite such feelings as statements like these must be capable of producing in the lepers themselves, is cruel in the extreme; and it is but a slight extenuation of such conduct to say that it was the result of thoughtlessness or ignorance. Such was not the estimate put upon the disease by Dr. Hillebrand or Dr. Hutchison, and it is not every day or in every place that we meet with physicians of their acknowledged capacity; and it would seem but an unwarrantable assumption upon the part of any one not possessed of better data than that in hand at present, to make assertions which contradict the experience of all the physicians of this place; and more especially of those who have made express visits to India, China and the West Indies for the purpose of investigating the disease.

It is true that doubts do exist among English and S. S., Continental physicians as to the contagiousness of leprosy, but there is no definite proof of the tenability of such an idea, and it would be a wrong to the whole nation, if a like conclusion were made the basis of legislation here. Firm in the belief just men- JOUV tioned, the Royal College of Physicians in England have declared that the compulsory segregation of lepers in India was undesirable; but from the testimony that has since, and still is, flowing in from various sources, it is more than probable if not a reversal of such a conclusion, will be eventually forced upon them.

From the information received in answer to our questions while among the lepers at Kalawao, we derived none that would satisfy us either one way the other as to the question of contagion fro, we the other as to the question of contage the clent to contact. Some statements seemed to clent to contact. while others were equally one contagious, impression among the learn the disease, and source of contagion, impression by transmission. disease may be t' ditary transmission the warrant the cance begun among the
